Society Settles In Summer Abodes

By MILDRED MARSHALL KOONCE.

When the President and Mrs. Wilson go to Shadow Lawn at the end of this month, according to semi-official rumors from the White House, the last link will have been severed in the chain which lightly binds society to the Capital in the summertime. As long as the White House remains open and Congress delays adjournment, a semblance of social life is maintained in fashionable menages and the utter social aridity of summer is not accepted seriously. But the departure of official families and the issuance of daily bulletins on the problematical date of the termination of the Congressional session are signals for the last flicker of frivolity in smart circles.

It is expected that the President will accompany Mrs. Wilson to Long Branch and remain for a week-end early in August when he will no doubt receive the formal notification of his renomination by the Democratic party. Shadow Lawn was prepared for occupancy several weeks ago and a corps of servants installed, but it is doubtful if the Chief Executive will go there permanently until after the adjournment of Congress. Mrs. Wilson will probably remain at Long Branch for the rest of the season and the President will join her for week-ends, returning to Washington to resume his close surveillance of affairs of state.

Meanwhile, the society set is scattered broadcast throughout the brilliant summer playgrounds of the North. Scarcely a fashionable resort but has its Washington colony, though none has secured such a large representation from the diplomatic and residential worlds at the Capital as Newport. Popular always as a summer rendezvous for visiting Washingtonians, the famous Rhode Island resort has lately acquired an enormous prestige and gathered in the very creme de la creme of the Capital's society set. The Russian Ambassador and Mme. Bakhtmeteff, the Spanish Ambassador and Mme. Riano, and Col. the Hon. Murrough O'Brien and the Hon. Mrs. O'Brien, of the British Embassy staff, are among the distinguished diplomats who make their summer home at Newport and contribute brilliantly to the success of the social season.

The latest additions to the permanent members of the Washington colony are Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont, who recently purchased Belcourt and are established there for the summer. Their villa is considered one of the handsomest of Newport residences and is admirably adapted to the generous hospitality and brilliant entertainments for which the Belmonts are noted. Mrs. William F. Draper and Miss Margaret Draper have returned to the Orchard, the Fearing villa at Newport, and have already contributed several charming and distinctive dinner parties to the series of novel functions which mark the summer social season.

Mrs. Robert McCormick, Mrs. Hope Slater, Miss Martha Codman, and Mrs. Robert R. Hitt are among others of the Capital's innermost circle who have become more or less permanent members of the Newport summer colony. Mrs. Richard Townsend, who is now at White Sulphur Springs, will join the Newport colony later and will open the Cliffs, the handsome villa which she leased from Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Fearing. Mr. and Mrs. George Howard and Miss Margaret Perin have returned to Newport for another season, and Mr. and Mrs. George Peabody Eustis, who spent the spring at the Rhode Island resort, will return there in September after passing the summer at Harlakenden House at Cornish, N. H. The Jerome Bonapartes have leased a villa at Newport and another at Narragansett, expecting to divide their season between the gayeties of the two resorts.

The proximity of Jamestown with its summer population of army and navy folk has brought a little colony of navy people prominent in Capital society to Newport. Notable among them are Rear Admiral and Mrs. Bradley Fiske, Rear Admiral and Mrs. William H. Emory, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Cameron McRae Winslow, and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Willard Brownson.
